Three Opinions on Making Traditional Houses into Tourist Attractions

Jigsaw ① Sato Tokio

Travel Company (Mr. Sato, Tour Agency Manager) (Easy Version)

I think traditional houses should be tourist spots. Many tourists want to see old Japanese homes. If more people visit, shops and restaurants will make more money. We can also teach visitors to be careful and respect the houses. Tourism can help the town grow and protect the culture at the same time.

Travel Company (Mr. Sato, Tour Agency Manager)

I love traditional houses—not just for their beauty, but for their business potential! Foreign tourists are fascinated by Japanese culture, and these houses are like time machines. If we organize tours, local shops will sell more souvenirs, and restaurants will have longer lines. With good planning, we can protect the houses *and* boost the economy. It's a win-win!

Jigsaw ② Tanaka Midori

Local Government (Ms. Tanaka, City Officer) (Easy Version)

Tourism is good for our town. It brings jobs and money. We can also use the money to fix and protect the old houses. But we must make rules, like 'no trash' and 'be quiet'. If we manage it well, everyone will be happy.

Local Government (Ms. Tanaka, City Officer)

As someone responsible for the town's future, I see tourism as a powerful tool. We can promote our culture, increase jobs, and even get funding to restore old buildings. Of course, we must create rules—no loud parties near the houses and no trash! If we do it right, everyone benefits: the town, the people, and the tourists.

Jigsaw ③ Suzuki Yuki

Local Resident (Grandma Yuki) (Easy Version)

I have lived here all my life. I love the quiet and the old houses. Now, many tourists come and take pictures. Sometimes they are noisy. Tourism is okay, but we need to protect our daily life too. These houses are not just for photos. They are our homes.

Local Resident (Grandma Yuki)

When I was a girl, I played under the old thatched roofs and listened to frogs at night. Now, I hear bus engines and people taking selfies in front of my laundry! Tourism brings money, yes, but I miss the peace and quiet. Please remember—we live here. These are not just photo spots. They are our home
